Online and hybrid courses

Online Courses

In an online course, students interact with their instructor and classmates through the Internet. There are usually no campus visits required. If you take an online class, you will read lectures, submit assignments, take quizzes, and do other course activities online.

Parkland online courses follow the same schedule as traditional classes, and students are required to complete work each week.

Hybrid Courses

Hybrid courses meet less often than traditional college classes — often only once a week. Students are required to participate in class each week and to complete weekly course work either online, in the Center for Academic Success, or in approved service projects in the community. Guidelines are provided in your course syllabus.

DEFINITIONS:

Online hybrid — in-class participation plus weekly online instruction

Service learning hybrid — in-class participation plus service projects in the community that have been approved by the instructor

Cooperative learning hybrid — in-class participation plus weekly participation in small groups in the Center for Academic Success

Online Degrees

The following Associate's Degrees and Certificates can be completed almost entirely online. See p. 19 to see which general education core course requirements are offered online. Most degrees require SPE 101 (Introductory Speech Communications) which requires on-campus visits.

Telecourses

Telecourses include video supplemented with textbooks and study guides. Learners come to campus for exams. These courses earn college credit toward a degree and may be transferable.

Videos are available for free overnight checkout at the Parkland Library and many district libraries. They are also broadcast on the PCTV channel. A broadcast schedule will be mailed.

- Videos will require one to two hours viewing per week.
- Syllabus will be mailed—be sure your current address is on file in Admissions.
- Textbooks are required and may be purchased at the Parkland bookstore.
